

Our Southern Breeze
Author, Daphene Jones

Daphene's journey with her Heavenly Father includes years of low self-esteem, clinical depression, being paralyzed with fear, and several suicide attempts.

In 1990 an event occurred that changed everything. Broken relationships were restored, she had the courage to start and run a successful company for 20 years, and true love was found.

She was the twin sister of Deborah Hall who was "Miss Debbie" in the New York Times best seller "Same Kind of Different as Me". When people heard this they wanted to know the rest of the story and she was asked to write a book.

"Our Southern Breeze" was initially written to tell the story of their lives growing up. But God had a different plan and changed the journey once more.

As she began to write using the journals she had kept through the years, a beautiful story began to emerge. It was clear that this book had a powerful message of hope, redemption, and second chances. Writing with Andrea Taylor from Dallas, TX, "Our Southern Breeze" became a reality at the end of December 2011. With the Southern Breeze that was promised to both Daphene and Deborah, God's mercy and grace extended not only to them but to all of their family.

After speaking at an event to raise funds for Wellspring Living, a non-profit organization for women who have been lured into sex trafficking, she felt that God was leading her to minister to not only these women but all women who desperately need to hear a message of hope and healing. That healing breeze is available to everyone.

Daphene is known for her warmth, humor and exuberance, and most importantly, her passion for helping people make positive changes in their lives.

She and her husband John Pisona live in Suwanee, GA with their precious border collie, Hanna.
